Postal Match #19 Results

D-Day and Surplusrifle.com 4th Birthday - June 6th

What is a postal match? More.....

Results are FINALLY in for the 19th postal match of Surplusrifle.com. Sorry folks it took as long as it did, it's summer time and there is like no open time for anything beyond soccer games, weddings and fieldwork. We started it with D-day and by the time these results are out, we could be looking at the Battle of the Bulge!

It's a bad turn out with 38 shooters from all over the US as well as several in Europe. I even was surprised to speak with Christian in Germany. Turns out that he shoots at the range here I fired my very first firearm and lives a mere few miles from where we were when stationed in Germany. It's a small world with the Internet.

We really can't make any comparisons between the Axis and Allied shooters except in category 1C/D. And as it happens, there is not all that much of a difference between the two 50 yard bench rest shooting. But it does, once again, show that if you want the most accurate loads for target shooting, your best bet is to use handloads.

Here are the results: (note MSL denotes Mil Surp Load ammo)
